Take it away Sid

In memory of Chris. (Note: this is a new page in progress, input is greatly appreciated, am intending to make a nice page in memory of Chris)

Sid Kipper was the creation of Chris Sugden.

Chris Sugden Wikipedia page

He was born in 1952 and died in the afternoon of the 4th of April 2024.

“Born in West Runton in 1952, Sugden initially studied pharmacy at Leicester Polytechnic before starting a PhD at the University of East Anglia.” from Wikipedia.

Comments at the Facebook Group:

Nigel Strudwick – I missed seeing him so much after he retired. Such a great talent and a nice bloke.

Graham Pirt – I spent a lot of time with him after he retired. His brilliance never waned, although I never understood how much he enjoyed watching Heartbeat!!

Mau Osborne – He was THE megastar of Norfolk

Jonathan Unna – I’ve just come out of seeing war horse at theatre Royal Nottingham and I couldn’t help thinking of Sid Kipper’s words: “He charged like a plough horse with a plough horse’s knack. 40 leagues onwards and 40 leagues back.” Greatly missed.

Keith Ball – Used to love Keith Skipper on Radio Norfolk when we lived there and we saw the Kippers live several times. Happy days. RIP Sid & Henry.

Alexander McGeoch – The time he had us all singing “he’s Norfolk and good” – the missis never cottoned on 🙂 Ernie Howard – I was at school, youth club, and college with Chris. He was a really funny, lovely bloke. We still sent Christmas cards and whenever Sid or the Kippers came to East Yorkshire I always went to see him. Such talent. I miss him.

Tricia Davies – Not a day goes by without a whiff of Sid Kipper in our house, he will always be played and missed.
