

All things are quite equal

The Kipper Family

1. A young per - son was a-wal - king one mor - ning in May.
2. Oh the way I re - spond to the charms that thou hast,
3. Said the o - ther I'm wil - ling if you would a - gree.
4. Both par - ties were ea - ger, both par - ties were brisk.
5. Now the first per - son de - clared with - out guile.

Met a se - cond young per - son a - wal - king that way.
I just can - not tell you lest you feel har - rassed to place you a - bove me and then un - der - neath.
Both failed to in - sure 'gainst a third par - ty risk.
For your sweet sake I would lay down my life - style.

Say the first of these peo - ple: "I have Spa - nish lea - ther and but you are so co - mely and so fair of face. How To a mos - sy green bank, these two per - sons did haste and
And so nine months la - ter as I un - der - stand, a So these two were mar - ried like sis - ter and bro - ther and oh, 'tis my wish we were bon - ded to - ge - ther.

I long to en - ter your per - so - nal space.____
there in a mea - ning - ful way in - ter - faced.____
third per - son sin - gu - lar came all un - planned.____
o - ver the thres - hold they car - ried each o - ther.

All things be - ing e - qual, our screws will be loose. What's sauce for the gan - der is juice for the goose.